

Who is going to maintain my web site after you have finished building it?

Who is going to maintain my web site after you have finished building it?

First of all, a web site is never finished. There's always changes to be made, like correcting grammatical mistakes or updating text or images.

If this is a static website , and depending on your knowledge and ability to work with web pages, you can either do your own web site maintenance, or hire us to maintain your web site.

If you decide to do it yourself, you're going to have to know at least something about html and transferring your html pages from your computer to the host server.

On the other hand, if you would like to hire OMD Solutions to maintain your web site, a monthly service contract can be arranged, or payment can arranged on a per service basis. Remember, free maintenance for the first year is usually included in your contract.

If this is a content management system, then you can perform your own content updates quite easily.